The big demonstration opens tomorrow morning with the civic parade of which Eugene Fish is chairman. It promises to be one of the largest ever seen in Janesville, and will far surpass even the exceptions of the most doubting. Mr. Fish reports that while he has a large list of entries all ready, it will be doubled by nine tomorrow morning, the parade is scheduled to start. Its route will be as follows: Start at Five Points, down Milwaukee to North Main, up North Main to North First street, North First to East Milwaukee street, down Milwaukee to South Main, south on Main to St. Lawrence avenue, west on St. Lawrence avenue to Park street, Park to Court, across the Court street bridge to South River, South River north to Milwaukee, and then back to the Five Points.

The next feature of the day is the ball game between Janesville and nine this evening one third of the fighting force of the great state of Wisconsin will be in camp within its limits as well as Battery F and Headquarters band of the Fifth Field Artillery of the United States.

By nine tomorrow it will also be the official state capital, due to the presence here of Governor Francis McGovern, who will arrive at 9:20 from Madison over the Northwestern road.

Battery F of the Fifth Field Artillery from Ft. Sheridan was the first military contingent to arrive. They reached Janesville yesterday, Sunday, noon, after their long, dusty march Beloit, at Athletic Park. This promises to be red hot, and will have plenty of time to finish before the military parade, which starts at eleven at the Five Points.

The details of this parade are not all complete, but it is safe to announce that the combined Janesville and Edgerton bands, forty five pieces in all, will head the procession, followed by the state infantry contingent, the Boy Scouts, Headquarters band of Ft. Sheridan, Col. Adams, commanding with Battery F, Fifth Field Artillery "A", W. N. G. bring up the left of line.

from Ft. Sheridan. Four miles from the city they were met by members of the executive committee of the celebration and given a welcome and escorted to the city where thousands of persons watched the long line of mounted men with the four big field guns, caissons, and long wagon train stretching out along three blocks march through the city to their camp at the fair grounds.

Here they pitched their camp and hundreds of the curious slipped into every nook and corner, invaded officers' row as well as the stables, and

The line of march will be the same as the civic parade except that after reaching North Main, the procession will turn north to Prospect avenue, east on Prospect avenue to East street, East street south to Milwaukee avenue, thence to South Main, down South Main to Clark street, where they will counter march and back to Park street, thence across the river on the Court street bridge to South River, thence to Milwaukee street and break up.

In the afternoon at two thirty comes the grand review and sham bat-watched all the details of the olive clad troops. Later, shortly after six, the Headquarters band gave a concert at the camp which those fortunate enough to be present, enjoyed very much.

The Ft. Atkinson company of infantry was the first of the state troops to reach the city and they arrived about ten o'clock, after a long and hot tramp from their home city, which began Sunday morning. They reached this city in first-class shape and went into camp in Spring Brook at once, where quarters had been provided for them. Co. L of Beloit arrived at three by special interurban car from Beloit, and joined the Ft. Atkinson company at their camp. Whitewater and Monroe will arrive either tonight or early in the morning and will also be in camp in Spring Brook.

This afternoon at 5:30 Battery A of Milwaukee will arrive on a special troop train from their army. They will unload at once and escorted by a band will go into camp at the grounds arranged for them on Washington street. The other Milwaukee infantry contingent will arrive on the second special train this evening at nine. They will also be encamped at the Washington street grounds.

DRAWN UP TO BE PACKED. The five bands engaged for the day will march up to the grounds about two followed by the infantry and state battery and pass in review before Governor McGovern. This will precede the sham battle, which follows immediately.

In the evening comes the march of the United Spanish War Veterans with the Order of the Serpent, colored lights and music. Bands will play on the stands in the city, and the close of the day promises to be as brilliant as the opening.

The following is the program for the next two days:

PROCLAMATION

Janesville, July 3, 1911.

To the Public:

Owing to the fact that there will be thousands of persons on the streets of the city July Fourth, and in view of the danger that might come from the use of explosives on the main thoroughfares during the presence of the crowds, I hereby issue an order that no fire crackers, pistols, dynamite cans, torpedoes or other explosives will be permitted to be fired.

In view of the fact that there will be numerous parades in which horses not accustomed to explosives are driven, the above order must be strictly adhered to by everyone. Janesville is preparing to entertain thousands of visitors and we must do all in our power to prevent accidents.

I would also request that the members of the Janesville Fire and Police wear their stars prominently on their coats and take upon themselves police powers during the three days that the present celebration is in session.

Signed,

The day started with temperatures 2 to 16 degrees higher than yesterday morning in the larger cities, New York topping the list with a rise of 72 to 88.

The government forecaster held no hope of relief for the next thirty-six hours.

The hot wave extends over middle Mississippi valley eastward over the Ohio valley and the southern portion of the Great Lakes region, the middle Atlantic and the New England states.

At Pittsburg. Pittsburg, July 3.—At one o'clock the thermometer registered 96 degrees. During the forenoon four persons dropped dead, one suicide; two were prostrated.

In Milwaukee. Milwaukee, Wis., July 3.—After the government street clock had risen to 136 degrees here today, two degrees higher than yesterday, a strong south-west wind sprang up bringing relief to the heat ridden city and sending the mercury tumbling downward.

In their first game in the Commercial League this year, the team from the Gazette office beat the Hanson, 16 to 14, Saturday afternoon. The game was played at the Hanson place up the river, but will count as a league game since it was played in the league with a percentage of 1,000.

Heavy hitting and sensational fielding were the order of the day, and when one side seemed to have the game on ice, somebody would break it up with a home run; three of these were counted, besides four triples and four doubles. G. Hulse pitched good ball for the Gazette aggregation and deserved the victory that he won. Ward caught for the Gazette; the Hanson battery was Schuler and Miller.

For seven and a half innings Saturday, the Y. M. C. A. and the Caloric played at the Athletic Park, and when the smoke cleared away, the totals stood 10 for the "Y" bunch and 9 for the Caloric. The losers spring a little surprise by sending in Graser, an unknown, to do the pitching for them, but he did not seem to be much of a mystery, for the association bunch got to him for 9 clean hits. Schuler, for the "Y" crowd, had no trouble at all, keeping the Caloric to two runs until the first of the eighth, when he let them slip over three more. The box score:

Heavy slugging by the Parkers was the feature of the game between them and the Plumbers at the Athletic Park, Saturday afternoon. Denver started the game in the box for the Plumbers, but after the Parkers had hammered him for some thirteen hits Palmer was sent in to stop the onslaught. In this he was fairly successful, shutting the game and giving the Parker gunners only four more hits. The Plumbers added the Parkers, also, by six errors, which helped to pad the Parker total.

Abraham, who did the twirling for the victors was effective throughout the contest, granting only seven hits for a total of three runs. One of these hits, however, was a clean homer into the creek. The box score:

WOLGAST-MORAN GO AT FRISCO TUESDAY

Contestants in Lightweight Championship Bout Are Prepared for Event—Wolcast Is Favorite.

San Francisco, Cal., July 3.—Trained to the hour and ready for their battle, which will be for the lightweight championship of the world, Ad Wolcast of Milwaukee and Owen Moran, the English lightweight, await the call to the ring tomorrow afternoon. Large crowds visited the camps of the rival fighters today and came away with the opinion that both are in good physical trim for the bout.

Judging from the betting favor around San Francisco, Wolcast will be the favorite by a very narrow margin when he enters the ring. Nearly all the sporting writers concede the Milwaukee fighter the victory, but they are also ready to admit that the little Britisher has a chance.

Moran is bubbling over with confidence and his friends are backing him liberally at the prevailing odds. He has been training faithfully ever since the articles were signed, first at Lak Tahoe and later at San Rafael, and if he loses the fight tomorrow he will not be able to make the old excuse of poor condition.

Like his sturdy little opponent, Moran is a slashing fighter, carrying a stiff wallop in either hand. As to hitting there is little to choose between them, for boys who have met both of them say Moran is the harder hitter of the two, although they admit Wolcast has the most dangerous swing. Moran depends more upon straight punches and he has a short uppercut that is likely to prove dangerous to his opponent. Like the Milwaukeean, the Britisher is in his element when at close range, hammering both fists against some unprotected portion of his opponent's anatomy.

The twenty-round route is believed to suit both fighters equally well. As to weight and size they are very evenly matched, both being about the same height and able to weigh in at about 120 pounds each. In the matter of ring experience it is customary to assign the advantage to Wolcast, but this is only because of the fact that Moran is a comparative newcomer on this side of the water. Wolcast has been fighting only about five years, while Moran's record dates back considerably earlier. Before coming to America the Britisher had been fighting for some years on the other side, and before Wolcast made his first appearance in the ring Moran had whipped Digger Stanley and other top-notchers. Moran then fighting in the bantam class.

His First Caviare.

"Poor Uncle Henry embarrassed us all when we dined in the ultra-fashionable restaurant." "In what way?" "Why, the waiter brought the dear old man a caviare sandwich and guess what he said." "What, my dear?" "Why, he said didn't care about blackberry preserves smeared on his bread for dinner."

When Facts Are Foolish.

"Your plot is preposterous," said the manager. "Such a thing could never happen in real life." "But it did happen in real life," replied the young playwright. "My play is based upon facts." "Very well, then. It had no business to happen. We don't want facts that haven't sense enough to be plausible."—Judge.

Hard Luck.
"What I consider the worst case of hard luck on record came to my notice the other day. A Chicago man mortgaged his home to buy an automobile, and in less than a week after he had purchased the machine his house burned to the ground, the garage in which the automobile was standing also being destroyed, together with its contents, and there wasn't a cent of insurance on anything."
"Oh, I don't know. I think I can tell you of a case of harder luck than that. I know a man who tried to mortgage his home to buy an automobile, but he was unable to find anybody who would advance any money on it, so he was compelled not only to get along without an automobile, but to continue to make payments on the house."

Trials of Life in a Small Town.

"I suppose you find it a little difficult to become accustomed to life in a small town, after having lived so long in a large city."
"Oh, dear, yes; it is very hard. I fear I never shall be able to feel at home here. When my little boy caught the whooping cough every woman living in our block knew about it and recommended something."

A Natural..... Sequence

The outgrowth of intelligent and persistent effort ought to be success. We are not the creatures of chance—the sport and prey of every stormy wind that blows. Good buying, close selling, energetic advertising, and polite and honest treatment, will make and hold trade. That's why we have earned and maintain our present position.

These Things Count

We may be out a little profit, but to close The Big Store for a Holiday directly affects our employees to the number of about seventy, and indirectly possibly three hundred and fifty people. Surely a thing to be considered.

TRAINING HARD FOR THE CONTEST OF HIS LIFE ON JULY 4TH.

OWEN MORAN, from photograph just received from San Francisco, taken at his training quarters. Moran is very confident that he can take the measure of Champion Wolcast on July 4th. The betting odds are running ten to eight in favor of Wolcast. This fight is a most important one since the heavyweight championship was decided a year ago. Both men are close in weight and in the pink of condition. "Mysterious" Billy Smith has taken charge of Moran and will direct the fight at the ring-side. The preparations already received for ring-side seats, assure an immense crowd.

the events are well filled and it is ex-

HON. OGDEN H. FETHERS.

tion. In his death Janesville loses one of its foremost residents, the state of Wisconsin a citizen, whose name and reputation went far beyond its borders.

Mr. Fethers leaves to mourn his death, a wife and friends in all walks of life. While he had retired from active law practice for some years his still retained his interest in affairs political and legal and his place in Janesville can never be filled. His death is a civic calamity.

Ogden H. Fethers was born in the town of Sharon, Schuylkill county, New York, Sept. 20, 1845. On his father's side he was descended from a long line of the staunch English Puritans, the first of whom came from England in the year 1700 and settled in the state of Massachusetts where they were prominent in the affairs of the colony and of the state in the Revolution and formation periods of the government.

Mr. Fethers, on his mother's side was descended from the Adams family his grandfather being a nephew of President John Adams. With this array of illustrious ancestry behind him,
Mr. Fethers was endowed with the finer qualities of character which marked the stalwart Puritans and the noble family of the Adams.

He received his education at Port Edward Collegiate Institute, from which place he graduated in the class of 1863. He took up his law studies in the office of James E. Dewey, of Cherry Valley, Otsego county, New York, and was admitted to practice in the courts of New York state in 1867, at the early age of twenty-two years.

In the winter of 1868 he went to St.
Louis for his health and remained there engaged in other pursuits until 1871 when he returned to New York and took up his practice at Canton, St.
Lawrence county. He continued his practice there until December of 1877, when he came to Janesville and entered into partnership with H. B. Eddridge under the firm name of Eddridge and Fethers.

In 1881 he formed a partnership with John Winans and in August 1883 Michael G. Jeffers was admitted to the firm. A later partnership was formed with Messrs. Fethers and Jeffers with George C. Smith, but Mr. Smith subsequently withdrew and Charles L. Ellhoff became the junior member of the firm in 1888. In later years, W. O. Newhouse was a member of the firm known as Fethers, Jeffers, Abbott and Newhouse. Mr.
Fethers retired from active law business several years ago and has lived quietly at his home, 605 St. Lawrence avenue.

Mr. Fethers was one of the foremost lawyers of the state and his advice in legal matters was considered most weighty. He was a staunch member of the republican party and in 1884 he was chairman of the Republican State convention.

He was united in marriage to Miss Frances Conkey, at Canton, New York,
July 15, 1868. His wife survives him.

Elliott and a parade of uniformed

Shopping for the Fourth.

Many were prevented from attending

IN DIFFICULTY OVER LOCATION OF TENTS

Property Owners on North Main Street
Objected to Carnival Company Occupying Street—Was Finally Settled.

Some difficulty arose this morning over the location of the tents of the Carnopolitan Carnival company on North Main street but it was finally settled after a conference by the Chief of Police, Alderman Hall, Sheriff, Buchholz and Spohn of the common council and the tents were placed in different positions. One member of a local firm located on the street made complaint that the tents would block fire fighting in case a blaze broke out and inflammable property was stored in the company's building.
This matter was settled and several other minor complaints were attended to so that the show tents do not block the street.

Similar trouble occurred Saturday when it was reported falsely that the carnival was to be located on South
Main street and the Corn Exchange.
This unauthorized report originated from an entirely unreliable source and caused some of the South Main street residents such uneasiness they sought to procure an injunction to restrain the committee from using the street.
As announced in Thursday's Gazette it was originally planned to place the shows on North Main street and this plan has been followed out.

One of the best bands will play at the "Top of the Hill Social" given by the ladies of the Baptist Church tonight. Everybody welcome.

WILL YOU Save the Boy?

Each year as July 4th rolls around the way for a sane celebration grows in popularity. The death list has been reduced but still the innocent boys and girls are the victims of a misconceived national celebration.

ARE YOU going to allow your boys to toy with death on July 4th?
ARE YOU going to furnish him with the money or explosives with which he may destroy property or life?
The answer is up to YOU, fathers and mothers.

The state and city may pass laws and ordinances. All well and good, but back of that is your own attitude. What is a safe and sane Fourth?
How may one be made attractive to the youth and perpetuate the patriotic memory of our glorious independence without the insane and unsafe methods only too common?
The "don'ts" are familiar to all. The constructive "do's" are less easily arrived at. By all means give the boy a real boy's holiday, full of fun and real boy's pleasure.
It is up to the fathers and mothers to work out this problem in conference perhaps with the boys themselves.

Fifty cities in the United States now have laws providing for a sane Fourth of July. In those cities parents and parades will be resorted to take the place of the old time celebration.

Bad for the Boys.
During a spring thunderstorm in Orange county, N. Y., a flock of crows numbering 83 sought the same tree for shelter. It was struck by lightning and 79 of the birds killed. There are not more than a dozen crows left in the county, and what the boys are going to throw stones at this summer is a puzzle. They'll have to coax the crows in from some other county or give up the fun of pegging.

When Oatmeal Was Canned.
When the collar of a grocery store at Franklin, N. H., was being cleaned out recently a can of cooked oatmeal was found. The can had probably been in the collar for 20 years, but the contents were found to be in perfect condition. Oatmeal was canned like corn, peas and other vegetables some years ago, before the advent of the present day partially cooked dry cereals.

On Grudge-Bearing.
One of the worst things about bearing a grudge is that the bearer is the only one who is likely to be burdened much by it.

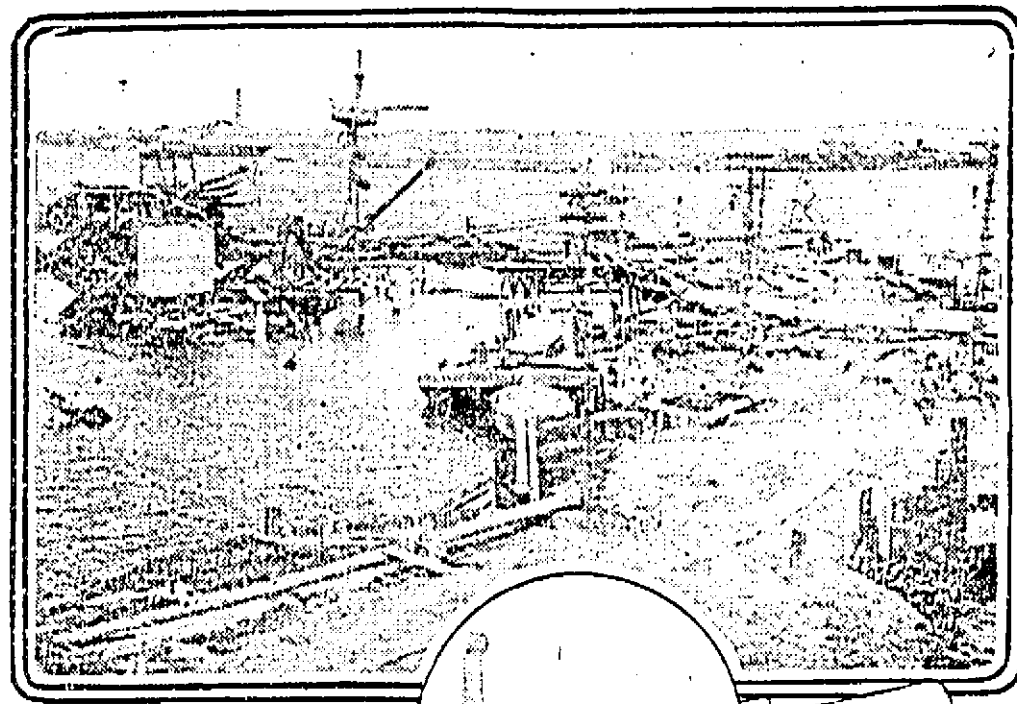

Thrifty Spider.
Spiders are said to "work over" their old silk, and thus save themselves the trouble of extracting and compounding it afresh.

He Made Good.
"That boy'll make his mark some day," said the father, with delight. He did—but in an illiterate way—for he never learned to write.

He Never Puts It Off.
When a young man has wild oats that he wishes to sow he doesn't wait for favorable weather.

There are more than 3,000 quick lunch stores in Manhattan, and every day more than 200,000 people run a marathon with their digestive organs.

RECOVERING THE WRECKED BATTLESHIP MAINE.

Below a closer view of the wreck showing on the side the old water line and the present. Grouchy.
"Yes," said the clerk, "if it wasn't for several severe attacks of dyspepsia I'd have a good paying job by now."
"I didn't know you suffered from dyspepsia."

Poughkeepsie Entertains Veterans
Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 3.—What promises to be the most successful annual encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans, Department of New York, opened in Poughkeepsie today and will continue until Thursday. The city is handsomely decorated in honor of the visitors and has made elaborate plans for their entertainment. The delegates are displaying a lively interest in the election of officers for the year. Francis J. Calkin, of Osewa, appears to be the leading candidate for department commander.

An Old Maine Bear Trap.
T. H. P. Bates of Oakland has a bear trap made by a Lubec blacksmith in 1787 to catch bears. The present owner has also used it for this purpose. The trap has two large springs, one on each side of the jaws; on one of the jaws are five large teeth and on the other side six. The jaws have an opening of 12 by 14 inches.—Lewisston Journal.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

AND he is so good to me," said the engaged lady, therewith concluding her estate category of "himself" virtues and her list of reasons why she was so fortunate in being about to marry him.

Incidentally, she evidently thought that one of the very best reasons—perhaps the best.

And so, undoubtedly, do most of the ladies who revel in the splendid service their knights of the loving heart do them.

And yet is it any reason at all?

Does the fact that the man-in-love becomes beautifully generous and tender hearted and chivalrous towards his lady love prove anything at all, except that he isn't a positive monstrosity?

All men are good to the women they love.

It seems to me the real test is—has your knight the qualities that will make him good to the woman he doesn't love?

Listen to what Agnes Repplier thinks about it.

"It's not what a man does when he's in love, but what he does when he's out of love (Philip drunk to Philip sober), which counts for characterization. That pleasant old romancer, Maistre Rusticino di Pisa, tells us that a courtier once asked Charlemagne whether he held King Meliadus or his son Tristan, to be the better man. To this question the Emperor made no reply; 'King Meliadus was the better man, and I will tell you why.' As far as I can see everything that Tristan did was done for love, and his great feat was never have been done save under the constraint of love, which was his spur and goad. Now, the same thing can never be said of Meliadus. For what deeds he did, he did them not by dint of love, but by dint of his strong right arm. Thenceforth out of his own goodness he did good and not by constraint of love."

It is this element of coercion which gives us pause. Not out of his own goodness, nor out of his own badness, does the lover act; but goaded on by a force too impetuous for resistance. When this force is spent, then we can test the knight of his "strong right arm."

It seems to me there is a good deal of food for thought in those paragraphs for the girl who is choosing her life partner.

Yes, I got your objection.

It would hardly be convenient or pleasant for him to wait to test the true worth of her lover until the force of his love is spent.

Still I think any woman, no matter how much she is in love, can and should stand aside from her love and try to judge whether this man who is so good to her, the woman he loves, has also the qualities which will make him good to the woman he doesn't love.

By this test and this test alone, it seems to me, can she truly judge whether he will be as good to live with as a husband as he has been as a lover.

Economy and Dress.

When Buying Silk.

THE silk dress and the silk waist are a part of nearly every woman's wardrobe. Therefore if a woman could know of some way to make sure of getting silk that would give good wear, she would rejoice. There are some points worth knowing about the care of silk and the kind to buy that will make for longer wear in a dress or waist. And if a woman will bear these in mind in buying silk or making it up, she is not so liable to be disappointed in her dress or waist as she might otherwise be.

Don't buy silk and lay it away. The silk dress and the dyo rats it. When such silk is made up, it goes to pieces in no time. The woman very likely blames the store for selling her unreliable merchandise, when the fault all the time is with herself for having kept it so long.

When making up silk, especially the light summer silks, a lining, if only of a twelve and a half cent lawn, will make for better wear. It takes the strain off the silk for one thing. Then, too, when the silk comes right next to the flesh, it is soon stained and rotted by the perspiration.

In making up an inexpensive silk, do not make it too tight. Every woman knows that price and quality go hand in hand, and that the inexpensive silk will not stand the wear that the higher priced kinds will. Yet notwithstanding this fact, some women will buy an inexpensive silk and expect it to wear as well as one worth two or three times as much. She makes it up in a style unfitted to a silk of this quality, and she wears it day in and day out. As a consequence, in a short time, it is in rags, and she thinks she has been cheated. But silk of this quality cannot be expected to wear like wool or linen.

Marquisettes, grenadines and fabrics of this nature, should be stayed at the seams and where the strain comes, or they will tear out.

In making up any silk, if a woman wants to get the most wear out of it, she should take into consideration the character of the weave and the quality of the silk in planning the style of her dress.

Some silks, of course, give better wear than others. Pongee is one of the best silks for wear. It has good style, comes nowadays in almost all desirable colors, and many of these shades will launder.

Poulard is another silk that wears well, also messaline and peau de cygne of not too poor a quality. Soft silks always wear better than harsh, stiff ones.

Navy blue, brown or black are perhaps the best colors for holding their own. Although dyeing to-day has reached such perfection that nearly all colors will wear satisfactorily. Pale gray, perhaps, will give the least satisfactory wear.

These suggestions may help to some extent in choosing silk. And that is about all that can be said. Sometimes an inexpensive silk will wear splendidly, and a costly one out and go to pieces in no time. It is a thing the most careful merchant cannot always guard against. As a rule, stores will make good, silk that does not wear honestly. And this is about the only remedy a woman has.

THE DAY OF INDEPENDENCE.

July 4.—This is the day of Independence, fire crackers, sky rockets, hot fingers, recitations of the Declaration of Independence, toy pistols, and tannums. We are now 135 years young and growing every minute. On July 4, 1776, Thomas Jefferson had completed his little essay that was intended to put John Bull out of business in this country, and he and his patriot friends gathered at old Independence Hall to O. K. whatever Thomas thought was proper. When that section was reached which set forth the proposition that "We hold this truth to be self-evident that all men are created equal," the assembly concluded the fact that the germ of a republic had been found. If there had been "reasonable trusts" in operation at that time Thomas might have put it in black and white in different form, but how could any one tell what would transpire up to 1911. But it made such a hit at the time that the populace yelled it "by heart" and then turned the lesson home with muskets. Hence the day of Independence, fire crackers, sky rockets, fire alarms, hot fingers, recitations of the Declaration of Independence, toy pistols and tannums.

CONTEST FOR WOMEN.

First Prize—Pair Silk Stockings.

NEW CAKE FILLINGS.

One of the most delicious desserts imaginable is prepared by using a layer or cake of angel food mixture about an inch thick and put together with a filling of sweetened whipped cream into which has been stirred a few chopped strawberries. Cover the top with the cream and a few berries cut in halves.

Sweet Cream and Chocolate Filling.—Boil together a cup of sugar, a half cup of cream and a square of chocolate. When a little dropped in water makes a ball, remove from the heat and beat until cool enough to spread.

Raisin Filling.—Boil together a cup of sugar and five tablespoons of hot water until thick, then pour it over a half cup of chopped raisins and a half-cup of nuts. When cool spread between the layers.

Prune Filling.—Put a cup of sugar into a sauce pan and when melted pour over a cup of prunes that have been slightly crushed with a rolling pin. When cold put this candy through a meat chopper, and stir it into a cup of whipped cream that has been flavored with vanilla.

Delicious Cake Filling.—Chop and mix together a pound of seeded raisins, three-fourths of a pound of figs and a pound of blanched almonds. Stir this mixture into boiled frosting, and spread thickly between two layers of cake baked in a long or square pan.

Caramel Filling.—Take a cupful each of brown and white sugar, one egg and two teaspoonfuls of melted butter and a half cup of sweet cream. Cook together until thick enough to spread. Flavor with vanilla and spread on the cake when cool.

Apple Filling.—Grate a sour apple, beat the white of an egg until stiff, add a half cup of powdered sugar and the grated apple very slowly.

THE QUAKER'S GOSPEL.

Of all the indirect causes of disease the most prolific is constipation; and there is no more general contributing cause of constipation than fine white bread.

"Fear God and keep your bowels open" was the whole gospel preached by a Quaker, who believed in speaking the simple truth in a simple way. The young physician may forget in his inquiry into the causes of our common ailments to ask whether we are living according to the gospel of the old Quaker; but our good old family doctor, who learns and forgets most of the brilliant theories of the profession, never forgets to ascertain the condition of elimination. Many of our able thinkers in the healing profession say there is but one cause of disease—the retention of waste matter in the system.

SMART DRESS OF PLAID.

The pretty model illustrated in the sketch is of blue, red and white plaid, with a coat of white woven crop trimmed with blue plaid and lined with white. The sleeves are now and attractive, and the neck is finished with a lace collar.

The Carpet.

The primary use of carpets was to cover floors. Carpet making, as a modern industry, was first developed in France. That country had large factories and a monopoly in Europe of the art of carpet-weaving when a rush-strewn floor was the rule even in the royal palaces of Britain. It was the expulsion of the Huguenots from France that caused many of the carpet craftsmen to cross the channel and settle at Bristol, Axminster, and other places now known to us as centers of the carpet industry. This country has now become pre-eminent in carpet-weaving, for the same reason that it has won first rank in all the other textile arts—not through devising new weaves, but by the invention of numberless time and labor saving devices in carpet-loom.—Exchange.

A FETCHING BONNET AND BROAD COLLAR.

There is something particularly fetching about this pretty bonnet with its lace trim under the brim and its lace over a Dutch necked frill. The stiff little nosegay of moss roses and forget-me-nots tucked against the collar comes slightly above the neck for the frill and the pin is set across pulled velvet crown. The low hair of the top of the frill, an inch or two dressing and how set across the back below the top corners of the lace.

THE SCARF AS A SUMMER WRAP.

Besides being adorably graceful, the filmy shoulder scarfs offer just a comfortable protection over slightly low necked bodices in the evening. This scarf of white chiffon is sprinkled with small steel discs, a border pattern of small steel discs being set along each end. The hat is a graceful piece made for summer, a restaurant dining and is made of heavy cream white batiste, embellished with a wreath of ten roses around the forehead. Under the hat is a facing of pale tea rose yellow satin.

HOMING PIGEONS IN A RECORD FLIGHT

Flock of Swift Winged Birds Belonging to Alexander Buchanan Make Fast Time to Janesville.

Janesville was the terminus of a remarkable flight by a flock of homing pigeons Saturday, which was loosed at Elroy at 5:05 in the morning by J. P. Dulin, arriving here at 8:16. The distance of 123 miles was made in three hours and nine minutes.

The pigeons are the property of Alexander Buchanan and have made some very good flights recently. The flock, which consists of nineteen birds flew a distance of seventy-seven miles Wednesday, from Elroy to Elroy in two hours and forty-three minutes. The feat accomplished by the birds in their flight to this city Saturday was a decided improvement over their Wednesday performance.

Next Saturday the birds will be liberated from Merrillan.

To Prevent Premature Burial.

Professor Anthony de Colnisi of Dresden has been granted a patent at Washington for an apparatus the object of which is to provide a safeguard against burial alive. The apparatus consists of an airtight chamber, with air pump attachment and a glass door on top. When a body is placed inside the chamber all the air is withdrawn, leaving the body in a vacuum. It is claimed that signs of life, if there be any, are readily detected as the air is being pumped out of the chamber, this being due to the release of the atmospheric pressure of about 15 pounds to the square inch from the body.—The Pathfinder.

Russia Land of Tragedies.
"Russia is the land of tragedies. The harvest is gathered daily and the victims belong to all classes. The people have become accustomed to scenes and descriptions of horror," according to the Russische Correspondenz, "and it requires a case like that of the artist Constantin Kryschitzki to attract attention. He placed on view a painting which he had recently completed, and was forthwith accused of having copied it from the work of another painter. He failed to convince his accusers of his honesty and the genuineness of his picture, and in desperation killed himself. On the same night, and before the news of the tragedy had reached them the artists of St. Petersburg held a meeting at which it was reported that Kryschitzki had been wrongfully accused. Too late!"

France and of the results.

Another feature of the address was the tracing of the growth of the prohibition movement in this country. The first total abstinence move and the first prohibition law was drawn up by the now famous Neal Dow in 1848. This bill was passed after a strenuous fight in the state legislature in 1852 and soon after seventeen states were added to the list, including Wisconsin.

In regard to the stand taken by the liquor people that every man has a right to make and sell what he pleases, Mr. Cox likened it to the argument that any man would have the right to turn loose a car load of mad dogs on the streets of a city. If he would tolerate this, but the sale of intoxicants has done more harm than all of the snakes and mad dogs.

The Wisconsin was in the fore in the crusade against liquor was stated also by Mr. Cox. He predicted that soon the whole state would be dry, as now over half of the towns have abolished the saloon.

BURGLAR SCARE WAS ENTIRELY UNFOUNDED.

Vociferous Snoring of Visitor at Cannon Home on Milwaukee Avenue Alarmed the Neighbors.

Rudely awakened by the police who had been called by a neighbor next door to look for burglars, last night, was the experience of H. W. Cannon, Sr., who is a guest at the home of his son, H. W. Cannon, Jr., 727 Milwaukee avenue.

It seems that Mr. Cannon, who had sought relief from the excessive heat of last night on the porch of his son's home, had been snoring so loudly that he aroused Mrs. Schultz, who lives next door, and who had likewise been awakened by the noise. She mistook the snoring sounds which testified to Mr. Cannon's intense slumbers, for the working of some midnight prowler and immediately notified the police, who investigated the matter and found the cause.

BRITZ HEADQUARTERS

BY MARION BARBER

ILLUSTRATIONS BY ROY

The British agent, as he did so, all re-entered the room with more alacrity, and extended toward his master a silver tray on which lay a tiny scroll, written in minute hieroglyphs of the Orient. The scholar broke the seal and scanned the paper swiftly. A slight exclamation betrayed that the information contained in the little scroll broke through even his magnificent reserve. His hand trembled a little as he handed the paper to the Prince. A hurried reading sufficed to destroy all of that young man's recently gained calm. He fairly hurled himself into a seat at the desk, and thrust his head into an open hat.

"Quick!" he said, "we have not a moment to lose!"

It would have been well for Britz if the young photographer had acquainted him promptly with the fact of the disappearance of the Millicent note. The detective's acute intelligence would have argued from that incident the need of even greater haste than he was making in pushing his pursuit of the Missions diamond to a close. But Britz, conscience-stricken though he was, was loath to send the information to the Headquarters man until he could have time to make further and more exhaustive search of his shop, as well as of the courtyard in the rear of the building on which its windows gave, it was dark in the court, and the imperfect light of his candle made his search so slow that by the time he was sure the note was gone beyond possibility of its recovery, it was too late for him to find Detective Britz at Police Headquarters. When his messenger returned with the report that the Central Office man had left his room, and that no one in the Mulberry street building knew where to find him, Britz became so alarmed that he hastened to Headquarters to try to take up the hunt for Britz from that point. He was as unsuccessful as his emissary, and he spent many anxious hours in the waiting room hoping for the detective's return. The photo engraver tried to console himself with the thought that the negative had been spared, and he therefore had been able to send to Britz's office the hundred facsimiles of the "Curtis dear" misadventure his customer had ordered. But it was poor consolation when he recalled the earnestness with which the detective had entreated upon him not to let the original leave his hands. Britz was an exceedingly uncomfortable young man during all the time he awaited the sleuth's return. His discomfort did not decrease as the hours dragged by.

But it would have been well for Britz to have that knowledge in regard to the strange vanishment of the Griswold note. It would have been better for Curtis Griswold if Dorothy March had not become conscience-stricken in respect of him that same evening. For little Miss March, being of Puritan stock, as soon as she perceived herself that she might have made trouble for Mrs. Missions's admirer by talking too freely to the bland man from Mulberry street in the cozy corner of the Furze theater, resolved to repair the mischief as rapidly as possible. She, therefore, sent a little note to the clubman, asking that he make it a point to see her in the course of the evening; and in the note she gave him a list of the several functions she intended to take in. The ball, Mrs. Missions attended, and at which Griswold scored what he regarded as a distinct gain in parading the wealthy widow before many of their acquaintances as a receptive recipient of his attentions, was only one of the affairs on Dorothy's list. Griswold received the note too late to come up with Miss March before the ball, so he decided to meet her at a later date. That decision upon one of his plans—the most important he had formed in many months, although he did not know its importance at the time. It had been his intention to go from the Fifth Avenue ballroom to the Hotel Renaissance, and if he had not received the note from Miss March, he would have done so even though he might have escorted Mrs. Missions to her home and passed a short time with her in the interval.

Dorothy's request flattered the clubman's vanity so greatly, however, that he did not hesitate to defer his visit to the Renaissance in order to keep the interesting appointment the debutante, with more confidence than discretion, made for him. The consequence was that by the time Griswold's interview with little Dorothy March was at an end, the hours had passed beyond a point to which even his ingenuity could stretch conventionally far enough to make it practicable for him to see Mrs. Delaroché that night.

Dorothy was dancing abstractedly when Griswold found her. She was so impatient to adjust the hair she felt she had done him that she saw him from her partner's shoulder before he picked her out from a score of other comely young women on the floor. Miss March instantly wavered of the waltz, to the dismay of the youth whose arm encircled her, and who rather fancied himself as a dancer. She lost no time in having herself escorted to a small conservatory, where she dismissed her partner with scant ceremony, and where, a few moments afterward, she was joined by Griswold.

Even then the debutante's unwitting tangling of the threads of Griswold's fate might not have had such influence upon his future if she had approached her subject with directness. Had she told Griswold at once what she had said to the detective concerning his skill as a draughtsman, the clubman's suspicions would have been aroused, and he might have taken steps that would have had a marked effect upon the development of the great Mission or mystery. But Dorothy was too flattered, too prettily remonstrated, to go straight to the heart of the subject, and in her innocent endeavor to post Griswold in respect of her chat with Britz without making him think she was a gossiping little busybody, she protracted her interview with the clubman through so many dances that when it ended Griswold persuaded himself the morning would be ample time to do that which he felt must be done to avert the probable consequences of Dorothy's girlish frankness. His vanity again played its part, too, for when he had thanked little Miss March for what he pleased to consider her interest in him, and when Dorothy, having signally failed to impress upon him the impersonal nature of her conscience stroke, found herself in a further flutter of bewilderment, Curtis Griswold proceeded to parade her up and down the dancing floor as effectively as he had shown off the rich and beautiful widow in the larger ballroom a little further up the avenue. Griswold prided himself on his versatility. He argued that it was as easy for him, as he would have expressed it to his club intimates, "to put a filly through her paces" as it had been to advertise the fact before the whole ballroom that Doris Missions, the fastidious beauty and worshiped possessor of many millions, apparently was on the point of accepting him as her second matrimonial venture.

All of which resulted in Griswold's long stay at the dance, in his ride with Dorothy to her home in an automobile otherwise occupied only by a satisfactorily self-centered chap; and in his waste of further time at one of his clubs after parting with Miss March and her duenna—a waste of hours any one of which might have been made as useful to him as a year of ordinary time. He was further disposed to procrastinate in this crucial moment by the success of the Headquarters man in throwing all suspected persons off their guard by keeping Elinor Holcomb in the Tomb. Through all his work on the Missions case, Britz had been beset with requests from Mrs. Missions, Sands and other friends of the widow's secretary, to permit them to give ball for her. Sands and Mrs. Missions were particularly insistent in their desire to see Elinor at liberty. Fitch, though normally his wish to see his fiancée free must have been stronger than that of anyone else, was partly reconciled to her protracted imprisonment by the detective's frequent assurance of her ultimate vindication. Moreover, the doctor, in consequence of his work on the case with Britz, had direct knowledge of the importance that the suspicions of others should not be alarmed. He had been with the detective when the card of Braxton Sands was discovered in the possession of the old curiously shop man; he knew of the note addressed to "Curtis dear" and signed "Millicent," and also of the desperate attempts made by the Millicents to find the diamonds. So Fitch did not bother the sleuth as much as did other friends of Elinor's, and it was well, for Britz several times was at his wife's ends to dissuade Mrs. Missions and Sands from going to the District Attorney and offering a heavy security for Miss Holcomb's appearance in the trial court. However, Britz had told them off, and it followed that Griswold nursed the delusion that Elinor and Fitch and Sands were suspected so strongly by the Central Office men that no search for evidence against anybody else was in progress. Donnelly and Carson also had fostered that misconception on the clubman's part by their unabated activity in hunting proofs of the girl secretary's guilt. Those worthless spent every day of their work on the case in tracing Elinor's past, and in efforts to couple Fitch with her suspicious theft of the jewels. Furthermore, being the sort of men who would rather win credit for detective work than do anything quietly in the way of real detection of crime or criminals, they could not refrain from expressing their belief in Elinor's dishonesty at every turn. They talked liberally to the newspaper reporters in the newspaper room, and to the several star reporters of the more enterprising papers who had been assigned especially on the case. Every word they uttered hinged on their evidence in the return of a verdict against Miss Holcomb, and, with the exception of two or three unusually sapient newspaper men who discounted the opinions of Donnelly and Carson because they knew Britz was doing the real work, and because Britz had as yet made no revelations, the reporters quoted them at great length.

Therefore, practically all the New York papers published stories in which Elinor Holcomb was tried, convicted, and sentenced in advance of her arraignment for the theft of the Missions necklace. Over-enterprising Sunday papers went so far as to publish page stories, purporting to be psychological studies of the mental bent that made the trusted secretary of a multimillionaire society woman, with a comfortable career in expectation, throw all chances to the winds by yielding to a momentary feminine impulse to possess herself of glittering baubles. Those psychological studies were interesting to the multitude, and might have been worth publishing had they been based on either psychology or truth. They had their effect on Griswold, though, and a consequence of that fact was that the clubman's mind was at ease so far as the possibility that he would be connected with the disappearance of the gems was concerned.

So Griswold did not go to the Renaissance that night, nor did he disturb Mrs. Delaroché with a telephone message, although an instrument stood on a convenient desk in her boudoir, and an extension wire connected it with a duplicate device that rested on a little Russian table beside her bed. It would have been the work of a moment for Griswold to get into conversational touch with Mrs. Delaroché, and he would have had the excuse of replying to her urgent and somewhat petulant note—if he had received it; unfortunately for him, he never had seen that missive. Kananada's guess in regard to the activity of his followers, Chunda and Gazim, was accurate, for these adroit Orientals had stolen the missing note from Griswold's apartment before it came under the observation of "Curtis dear," to whom it was addressed. Altogether, once more, as he would have expressed it, things were not "breaking" for the suave secretary of the Ironsides Trust Company.

CHAPTER XXI.

Stop, Thief!

Millicent Delaroché slept soundly. Here was the type of beauty that retains its freshness through indulgence in creature comforts. Not all her fondness for amusement could lead her to rob herself for many nights of the repose she instinctively knew was essential to the preservation of her charms. She was the sort of woman, past thirty, who retains a false youth sometimes more effective than the immaturity which is measured by the calendar. Her complexion was as delicate as a debutante's. Her eyes were brighter than those of the average athletic young woman, and no silver thread shot the dusk of her luxuriant hair. All this was due largely, she was convinced, to her lifelong habit of sleeping early and often, and of resolutely refusing to let her slumber be disturbed by any such useless things as dreams, which, after all, "are mere ghosts of thought—and too much thinking was not one of her follies."

Though Mrs. Delaroché slept profoundly, her external senses were not wholly unvigilant. Long study of herself had made her sensitive to disagreeable impressions that were purely corporal; and so, though no intrusive vision of mind could interrupt the fluid calm of her beauty sleep, a slight, uncomfortable feeling at the precise spot whence her tresses swept upward in an elaborate coiffure or parted in the braids of negliges had the effect of arousing her as no mere dream possibly could have done. It required not many seconds, allowing for the habits of her mind, and the fact that she suddenly was recalled from deep repose, for Mrs. Delaroché to realize there was a hand beneath her pillow, and that hand was not one of her own. Rigid with fright, she waited an instant to assure herself she had not committed the innovation of dreaming, then she made a swift reach for the alien hand—too late. It had been withdrawn swiftly in the few moments requisite to complete comprehension of the situation, and if Mrs. Delaroché had not been so certain that she never dreamed, she might have thought she still was sleeping. Instinctive exploration of the space beneath her pillow, however, told her the midnight hand had not gone away empty. Realizing that, she was broad awake in an instant. She sat erect so swiftly that she bruised her forehead slightly against something cold and hard and round and smooth that was immediately pressed menacingly to her head.

"Don't move, or you'll get this!" said a rough voice.
